Vault Capture

Vault Capture is an Android app I designed and built to feed my Obsidian notes: quickly add tasks, tick them off, and save links to read later straight from the phone's share sheet. I designed the interface and identity first as a mockup, then built it in Jetpack Compose. The logo is a faceted gem, a nod to the obsidian it feeds.

Auto Folder Creator

A Windows desktop app I designed and built from an old Python script. Choose a project type, enter a name, and it creates the full folder structure, a Word brief and any template files, with a shared job number like J-0043. It also tidies up existing projects without moving a single file. I designed the logo, light and dark themes, and the settings and organise screens.

Valour Magazine

Valour is a concept men's lifestyle magazine covering grooming, style and everyday know-how. The identity is a bold cut-out “V” placed over the cover model's face, carried through a cover poster, a screen-printed version and full editorial spreads on whisky, shaving, wardrobe and coffee.

Contents and feature spreads: grooming, style and lifestyle.

Folder Tidy

A Windows app for keeping folders in order. Clean up lets you tick the folders you don't want: empty ones come pre-ticked, folders with contents ask where things should go, and removals go to the Recycle Bin. It also watches the Downloads folder and moves finished downloads into the right place, and every action can be undone for 30 days. Protected folders are never touched. Built with Electron and Node.js, with light and dark themes.

Corner brackets and the page code let the app find, straighten and number each page. Sections never move, so the app knows which line is a task, a time or a thought.
